

Ryan Chaban is a Fellow at the Advanced Research Projects Agency – Energy where he is interested in technologies accelerating the deployment of energy infrastructure. Ryan completed his PhD in plasma physics and assists with the fusion portfolio (CHADWICK, BETHE) at ARPA-E.

He is currently working on developing programs in plasma chemistry, pulsed power, wireless power transmission, and superhot geothermal.